KEETON—DAVIS

The biggest social event of the year for West Liberty was the wedding ceremony of Miss Ethel Mae Keeton and Raymond Franklin Davis at the Methodist church here at 4 o'clock on Saturday, August 26.

Ethel Mae is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Keeton and was born and raised here. She is a graduate of Morgan County High School, attended the State University and received an A.B. degree from Asbury College at Wilmore.

D. R. Keeton, father of the bride, who gave her away in marriage, is special investigator of the bureau of alcohol tax unit of Kentucky and has for some years had headquarters either at Lexington or Louisville.

Raymond Franklin, who was the groom in this important event, is the son of John H. Davis of Ezel. He attended school at the University of Denver, and is a graduate of the University of Kentucky. He is now employed as principal of the Hustonsville High School in Lincoln county, where the couple will live.

The impressive service of the Methodist church manual was read by Rev. G. B. Trayner, pastor of the M. E. church at Morehead and former pastor of the M. E. church at West Liberty.

The floral and dress displays were most impressive and inspiring to persons who are interested in such things.

At the reception held at the home of the bride following the ceremony more than ninety relatives and out of town guests were present. Cake and ice cream were served, the bride herself cut the three tier wedding cake.

The couple left here Saturday evening on a short wedding trip after which they will keep open house at their home in Hustonville.

BALDWIN HAS IDEAS

Stanley Baldwin, former Prime Minister of Great Britain, is in the United States for a week and he thinks he has information which will help the United States solve its problems of unemployment, labor-management relations and political action by labor groups.

Now, this is what we call getting help from across the ocean. If Mr. Baldwin can solve the problems of the United Statse he will probably do more for us than he was able to do for his own country. It must be admitted, however, that the British have done a better job in some respects than we have and so, it might be worth while, to listen to our visitor

England, says Mr. Baldwin, had her crisis in 1924, when class feeling was high and the country was restless and undecided which way to turn The general strike was the culmination of a challenge to government but it was a turning point, with both sides coming out of the struggle without bitterness. Labor, he says, has come down to the idea of working within a constitutional government.

Mr. Baldwin points out that the "political weapon is no longer being threatened," that the old die-hard employer has been largely eliminated and that "we could make ten times the progress if politics could be eliminated from labor relations."

There is food for thought in Mr. Baldwin's ideas. He is, we suspect, a loyal Briton, having demonstrated his faith in his government by contributing a part of his personal fortune to the British government in an effort to help it solve its financial problems some years ago. Not many Americans have been this patriotic!

EDITOR QUOTES LAW

Urged by taxpayers of the county the editor of the Wolfe County Herald prints in late issue in bold face type a late Kentucky Statute (Section 1846) which requires the Fiscal Court of each county to have printed yearly the receipts and expenditures which they have handled during the year. The statute provides a penalty. The state legislature has passed statute after statute to protect the taxpayers of the state but have generally failed to attach an adequate penalty for non compliance with the law. This late statute is an effort to correct this lack of teeth in former laws and should go a long way in bringing lax officials to a realization of their duty to the man who pays.

THE VICTOR

The test of a man is the fight he makes,
The grit that he daily shows.
The way he stands on his feet and takes
Fate's numerous bumps and blows.
Its the bumps you get and the jolts you get
And the shocks your courage stands
The hours of sorrow and vain regret,
The prize that escapes your hands.
That test your mettle and prove your worth,
It isn't the blows you deal,
But the blows you take on this good old earth
That shows if your stuff is real.—
A Kiwanis Sentiment.

New Residence

Henry Carter is building a new residence on Water street next to the Homer Elam home. The home will be of brick with basement and all modern improvements.

GEORGE FANNIN

County Court Clerk, George I. Fannin, died at the St. Joseph's Hospital at Lexington on Wednesday morning, August 30, aged 63 years.

His parents were H. M. Fannin and Mary Ison Fannin of near Ezel, both deceased.

He was married Feb. 22, 1905 to Miss Stella Dennis, also of Ezel, who with a son, Herbert, and a daughter, Mrs. Clifford Long, and two grandchildren, Ferrell and George survive. He is also outlived by one brother, Tom, near Ezel.

Mr. Fannin was taken sick on Monday, August 14 with what was thought to be pneumonia, but later found to be a pernicious anemiac condition. His condition grew gradually worse and on August 26, he was taken to the hospital, where a blood transfusion failed to rally the patient. His wife and daughter remained with him while his son took care of the office.

The passing of Mr. Fannin marks the end of two county officials' careers here within a few months. Mr. Fannin was serving his third term as County Court Clerk. He was an able, courteous and much loved public servant.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed at this time.

FARMERS' COLUMN

Winter Oats Yield

Ernest Long, Rossington community, McCraken county, reported to County Agent Joe Hurt a yield of 170 bushels of winter oats from three acres. When the field was broken in August, 1938, it had been in redtop and korean lespedeza for 10 years. The lespedeza was 3 inches high when turned under. Ten tons of limestone and 600 pounds of high analysis phosphate were applied after breaking, and five bushels of oats were seeded September 20, broadcast and disked in. Harvesting was done June 15.

Hybrid Corn Resists Storms

Hybrid corn withstood storms 50 percent better than commonvarieties, reports County Agent. C. V. Bryan of Taylor county. Wind and rain flattened fields, twisted corn and damaged the crop, but the strong stalks and deep roots of the hybrids held fast. Now many farmers are planning to plant hybrid seed next spring. Bryan also reports wide interest in Italian rye grass, following yields ranging up to 39 pounds of seed to the acre. Several thousand bushels of seed were sold for fall sowing.

GREATER USE OF PHOSPHATE

A wider use of phosphate is one of the most important problems in the fertilizer field, according to a recent report of a committee of the land-grant agricultural colleges in the seven Tennessee Valley states.

The report deals with the testing of concreted phosphatic fertilizers by thousands of farmers under the guidance of the agricultural extension services of the colleges.

"Phosphates are increasingly necessary to grow cover plants to protect farm lands from erosion and to rebuild the fertility of older areas to profitable levels of crop production," says the report.

Kentucky farmers last year received 33,263 tons of triple superphosphate from the Tennessee Valley Authority, in line of benefit payments in the Agricultural Conservation program, and so far this year have asked for nearly 35,000 tons of this high-test phosphate. Nearly half of a million acres in Kentucky were treated with phosphate last year.

HOSIERY COSTLY

Few small items in the clothes budget loom as high as hosiery. By observing certain rules of buying and care, their yearly cost can be materially reduced, says Miss Iris S. Davenport of the Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Buy where absolutely fresh stock is assured.

Get 2-thread or very sheer hose only for party use.

Get the servite weights, 7 to 10 thread, for ordinary use.

Remember that stocking should be one-half inch longer than the foot when standing.

Wash "wrong side out" and instead of squeezing or wringing, dry partially in towel—then hang by the toes to dry.

Be sure that the toenails have been carefully filed, and then put the hose on "foot first" to insure against snags.

If a defective pair of hose is obtained, some stores will replace with a new pair.

Remember that price is no indication of value ,and pay as little as seems compatible with reasonable production.

Before buying, study the construction of a pair of hose, and see that it is well reinforced at points subjected to strain. As there is a choice of lengths be sure to select the right one.

Know the right size and insist on having it.

Music Classes

I wish to advise all my music pupils for this year that I will be at home to start my classes on or before September 8.

Safetygrams

BY FRED W. BRAUN © The Safety Man

"I'll kill that guy!" So spoke a friend of mine recently when a driver behind us persistently blew his horn at an intersection.

How many times have you felt the same way?

About the most discourteous driving habit people have is to try to "blow others out of their way." This is dangerous as well as discourteous. Frequently drivers become frantic in traffic when this is done, and I know of many accidents that were a direct result of such action.

Public opinion should rise against this type of driver until he realizes that courtesy is the keynote of conduct on our highways.

"It's Smart to Drive Carefully."

BOB JONES COMMENTS

The Psalmist said, "A man's heart deviseth his way: but the Lord directeth his steps." This is a most significant statement in this day when ambitious dictators are endeavoring to build empires. Through the centuries man has tried to run his own affairs. What a mess he has made! Alexander the Great could conquor a world, but could not conquor himself. Napolean left a path of blood as his army marched to victory and then to defeat. God is running this universe. Man cannot run it. Of course, there is the directive as well as the permissive will of God. God is not always directing the affairs of man, but God permits men who are in rebellion against Him to have their own way for a season. "I cannot understand God," someone said. A God that man could understand would not be a big enough God to run a universe and work out a plan of redemption for a fallen race. His thoughts are not our thoughts. Out yonder in eternity we shall understand some things we do not understand now. God loves us. We can understand that. He is our Father and "Like as a father pitieth His children so He pitieth us" in this time of crisis and strange world movements.

"In Thy presence is fullness of joy; and at Thy right hand there are pleasures forever more." We read these wonderful words in the sixteenth Psalm. The world has no joy and no abiding pleasure to offer any man. Jesus said He would give us His peace, not as the world giveth peace. The world always offers counterfiet money. God gives the genuine coin. In His presence there is fullness of joy. In fellowship with Him, in family prayer, in private devotions, on acrowded highway ,aboard a railroad train, on a ship at sea, in the flying machine, in the barnyard of the old country place, alone under the starlit sky at midnight, in our native land or on foreign soil—wherever we find His presence we find that which satisfies the heart. We find fullness of joy. The pleasure at His right hand is pleasure forever more. We speak of worldly pleasure. Worldly pleasure may gratify, but heavenly pleasure satisfies. They may be temporary gratification in a champagne cup or a wine glass. There may be a sensual, fleshly gratification which a godless man finds at the devil's parties. The world is taking that which gratifies instead of that which satisfies. A man who once comes to know the joy of communion with God and who once partakes of heavenly pleasure loses taste for anything the devil has to offer.

One of the strongest arguments against the election of a Republican Governor in Kentucky this fall is the memory of previous Republican administrations in the State. There have been five Republican Governors of Kentucky—Bradley, Taylor, Willson, Morrow and Sampson—and certainly there is nothing in the record of any of them to induce a Democrat or an Independent, interested in good government, to experiment with a sixth. Not all the Democratic administrations in Kentucky have been perfect, but the Republican rule was marked by dismal failure, an invariable increase in the State debt, and ofttimes by scandal.—Elizabethtown News.

WASHINGTON NOTES

Movies

Charles H. Carr, Assistant U. S. District Attorney, is in California to begin a three-fold investigation of the motion picture industry. He will check up on labor racketeering, income tax evasions and violations of the anti-trust laws.

Communists

The House Committee on Un-American Activities renewed its meetings last week. Hearings are expected to develop a definite tieup between the Communist party in the United States and the Russian Soviet Government.

Changes

One of the changes in the old age pension acts illustrates the wider scope of the security offered. For example, under the former law a man who had been earning $100 a month for five years would have received $17.50 per month, single or married; now, he will get $26.25 if single and $39.38 if married.

Up 31 Per Cent

Construction contracts for the first six months of this year were 31 per cent above the same period of 1938 and at the highest peak since 1930.

Ended

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montant, leader of the fight gaanist the Presidents reform of the Supreme Court, agrees that the controversy has ended in its liberalization. The Senator says he did not object to the President's objectives but to his methods.

Passports

Somewhere in Europe are 500 American passports, which authorities fear may get into the hands of spies. When American volunteers in the army of Loyalist Spain reached the Spanish border they were relieved of their passports and given identification tags. Nobody knows where the passports are today.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson Lacy of Malone were in this neighborhood this week gathering up goods for Ira Stacy who got his house and every thing in it burnt up Sunday night.

Aunt Lizzie Castle of Panama visited her daughter, Mrs. Walter Cox, of Malone, the week end.

SCRAPBOOKS

Today I received from the mother of one of my students an old scrapbook, made three quarters of a century ago by a boy who later became a famous editor. I have been turning through it, reading a bit here and there, and trying to recreate the time and the boy. And that brings up the whole question of scrapbooks.

Reading matter was scarce, as you all know, when some of us were young. Books were passed around from house to house, so that a single volume had often had half a hundred readers. Those who could not read very well listened to others read aloud. I got my first love for poetry in that fashion and heard older people read English and American classics long before I knew A from B. Not many people could afford to buy books outright. The scrapbook became a substitute, a sort of home-made one, for books. From the weekly newspapers and the few cheap magazines we received we saved such poems or stories or pictures or jokes as struck our fancy, laying them by for a later day when we would make a scrapbook.

The scrapbook, in my case, at least, was largely a matter of winter work, when I was shut indoors with a cold or on the long winter nights around the fireplace. I still have several of these home-made books, some fairly good, others pretty bad. The astonishing thing is that my scrapbooks and others I have seen show a startling lack of arrangement or choice. The dullest things that took our eyese were given as much attention as genuinely valuable things.

Many of these old scrapbooks have assumed genuine historical value, for they have kept alive material that would otherwise be lost. Libraries that attempt to preserve valuable documents often prize highly these unassuming records of things and times long gone. These scrapbooks become, thus, a sort of unplanned, unbiased history of long-past events.

My scrapbooks, quite prophetically, leant toward poetry. I have just turned through one I made in 1902 and have found more than a hundred standard poems that would be in any inclusive anthology of American and English poetry. Besides these, there are several hundred poems that might be called minor poems, good a tthe time they were written but now largely forgotten. I mention this scrapbook in detail to remind you that the newspapers used to feature poetry, some of them having a double column once a week. That is where I got many of my gems. Newspapers today would feel somewhat cheap to print on their editorial page a poem that has become a part of our heritage; thus time passes.

Not every one who planned a scrapbook actually made one. In a shoebox were preserved all the valuables until they became yellow with age. I have visited in some quaint old homes on the outskirts of the Fidelity neighborhood in which I was entertained, really so, by being shown the poems, stories, jokes, pictures, cartoons that were to form the basis of a scrapbook that had never and will never take form. Treasured up for years, these bits of printing opened the big world to people who probably never wandered twenty miles beyond thehills by which they were surrounded.—Kentucky Folklore Series.

Get a Peep

Clifton C. Carpenter of West Liberty High School, (Center) with a comrade enrollees at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana, stole a peep into the camp kitchen before chow call to watch cook, Harlan Burch, of the 11 Infantry prepare chicken for Sunday dinner. The kitchen under the supervision of Sergt. Sam Byrd, used 1,300 pounds of chicken, 2200 pounds of potatoes, 40 gallons carrots, 60 gallons peas, 40 bunches celery, 336 cans of milk, 50 pounds of butter, 400 pies, and 80 gallons of ice cream for this noon meal.

CURRENT HISTORY

Yesterday, while visiting Barnett Ridge school, I noticed upon the blackboard several questions touching on history, and concerning Henry the Third and Simon de Montfort.

What I am going to say now is not meant as a criticism of Barnett Ridge school or of the teaching of history in general. History is the most important subject in the curriculum. Without an understanding of history one cannot understand the world as it is now, or as it is about to be. It is precisely because history can enable us to see where we came from, where we are, and where we are going, that it is important. Unless the study of history does that, it is valuless.

Of all the things that go to make an education, the most important is an understanding of the historical period in which we live. With it one understands what is going on, what forces are at play, what battles are going on. With such an understanding one is prepared to take his part in the world—one is prepared to live in the present epoch. Without it one is lost, groping, utterly at sea.

This is the most significant and the most complex of any decade thru which the world has passed up to now. More happens now in a year than happened in ten years before the World War. More happens now than happened in a hundred years before the coming of the Machine Age.

The world has shrunken ,and is still shrinking. Every day the advances in machine production, in transportation, communication, and combat make the world a smaller place—bring us into closer contact with each other far and near.

This shrinking of the world makes it necessary that we should study the NEWS, that is CURRENT HISTORY. It is no longer enough to know what is going on in our own "hollow" or our own county or state. If we are to know what is happening to us, or about to happen to us, we now need to know what is going on in places as far away as Manchukuo, Ethiopia, Spain, Czechoslovakia, China, Poland, Germany, Russia, France, England. In other words, we need to know WORLD NEWS.

It is well that the children in Barnett Ridge school, and in the rest of the schools are studying history. But let us be sure that in studying history they do not lose sight of the HISTORY THAT IS BEING MADE, right now. Let us be sure that we teach the children, not a dry list of dates, nor a fascinating story that is unrelated to our present life; but that we teach history in such a way that it will enable the children to understand the struggles now going on.

Complex as it is, and full of the most bitter conflicts, as it is, we none the less have to live in the present age. It is our duty as teachers to help the children understand what forces are contending, and why.

A CURRENT HISTORY CLUB should be made a part of the life of every school in Morgan county. Every school should get a good cosmopolitan daily paper, such as the Louisville Courier-Journal, which gives the world news. Every school should have a project for keeping a scrapbook of clippings concerning WORLD EVENTS. Children should be taught to be descriminating in reading the news, and should learn that merely because a thing appears in print, it is not necessarily true. They should learn to distinguish between fact, or reputed fact, and opinion. They should be taught to shift the grain of fact from the chaff of opinion and propaganda. In this connection they should learn that press itself is likely to present a picture of the news colored to suit the tastes and viewpoint of the owners of the papers. Nevertheless, they should study the news, for News is the Most Important Study in the World Today.

Also, every school in Morgan county should have a Radio Club, as an accessory to the Current History Club. The Radio Club should keep the school informed of what news is coming over the air.

With so much happening every day, with such a tense world situation, it is highly important that the schools, especially the rural ones, should take advantage of the radio. One of the best sources of world news over the air is to be found on the Columbia Network, of which WHAS is a member, particularly in the news-casts and comments of Mr. H. V. Kaltenborn.—WALLACE BYRD, M.D., Director, Morgan County Health Dept.

The children have already sold enough candy this year to get a volley ball and soft ball, which we are ordering this week.

MALONE SCHOOL NEWS

This is the seventh week of school and it finds us busy with our school work, as well as having a good itme gaining points on the side of the Boons and Penns. Both sides are going strong with the Boons some few points in the lead.

Our teacher and we have planned for the losing side to entertain the winning side with a program at the end of each month. So each of us are working hard to make our side win.

We have been trying to make our room neater in appearance by adding some pictures, curtains to match the paint on our school room walls and some pots of growing flowers.

Our teacher as well as each of us are trying hard to make this a most successful school year.

So far our visitors have been our helping teacher—Bernard Haney, one of the board members, Mr. Harlen Murphy, Joe Wolford and R. C. Littleton, who gave each of us a nice pencil.—Daisy P. Nickell, Seacher of Lower Grades.

THREE KINDS OF TAXES—The government collects taxes (1) on wealth, (2) for special benefits, and (3) to control forces in the public interest. The rich man pays more taxes on his house or his income because he has greater ability to pay than the wage earner. Water rates and gasoline taxes are examples of the second type of taxes. The more water used, or the more gasoline consumed in driving on the highways, the greater the benefits received, and the greater the taxes. Tariffs exemplify the third type. Tariffs usually are levied to protect American workmen from competition of low-standard labor abroad.
